

BEST BUY SAVE $150 BY MAIL-IN REBATE* ON SELECT NOTEBOOKS & DESKTOP PACKAGES

LOSE THE WIRES.
FIND YOUR FREEDOM.
LEARN MORE ▶

MSNBC News

Print | Email | Alerts | Newsletters | Hel

Newsweek Entertainment

- Newsweek
- Periscope
- National News
- Campaign 2004
- World News
- The War in Iraq
- Business
- Enterprise
- Tech & Science
- Health
- Society
- Entertainment
- Tip Sheet
- Columnists
- Letters & Live Talk
- International Ed.
- Multimedia
- Search Newsweek

Honolulu Academy of Arts

Georgia On Our Minds

Long after her death, O'Keeffe's still a definitively American artist. But take the myth with a grain of salt

Still grand: O'Keeffe's Waterfall No. III 'Iao Valley

By Peter Plagens
Newsweek

Aug. 23 issue - For most Americans with an interest in art, the monumentalized flowers and delicately breathtaking landscapes of Georgia O'Keeffe (1887-1986) are modernist enough to be exciting and traditional enough to be credible. Her persona is equally compelling: the fiercely independent, no-man-needed woman in a long black dress, walking the canyons of New Mexico in search of the perfect bleached skull to paint. A few curmudgeons consider her work "The Bridges of Madison County" on canvas: high-toned at first glance, sentimental at bottom. But from the beginning, O'Keeffe was determined to find a style that was honest, pure and personal, and never to compromise it.

Her early success was startling. By 1927 she was supporting herself entirely

advertisement

- Georgia On Our Minds
- Snap Judgment: DVDs
- Newsmakers

• More Entertainment

MSNBC ShoppingClassifiedsNewsbot

Search MSNBC:

Advanced Search

by painting; in the 1930s her pictures commanded the price equivalent of five automobiles. And she's still a star. "A Sense of Place," the current exhibit at the Georgia O'Keeffe Museum in Santa Fe, N.M., shows a selection of her landscapes, along with 20 color photographs of the sites that stirred her to paint them; attendance has spiked 21 percent. (The show runs through Sept. 12, then travels to Columbus, Ohio, and Wilmington, Dela.) And at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, "Georgia O'Keeffe and the Sublime Landscape" will welcome an estimated 60,000 spectators by late September before moving on to Fresno, Calif.; Indianapolis; Chattanooga, Tenn., and Boise, Idaho. That would be second only to the turnout for the museum's Monet show a few years ago.

O'Keeffe claimed that her visual memory reached so far back that she could accurately recall her baby quilt. At the age of 12, she'd decided she was going to be an artist. But as a massive new biography—"Full Bloom" by Los Angeles art writer Hunter Drohojowska-Philp—makes clear, O'Keeffe's real life wasn't quite like the defiant legend her admirers crave. She met the love of her life, the much older modernist photographer Alfred Stieglitz, in 1916, when she stormed into his avant-garde New York gallery demanding to know why some of her drawings had been hung there without her permission. They became lovers and Stieglitz left his wife and child to marry her. He pushed O'Keeffe to be a great painter—and she pushed herself even harder. Their collaboration was both artistic (she posed nude for his lens) and domestic: she settled into being a surprisingly dutiful wife, packing china service for 12 every summer when the couple decamped from their Manhattan penthouse for upstate Lake George.

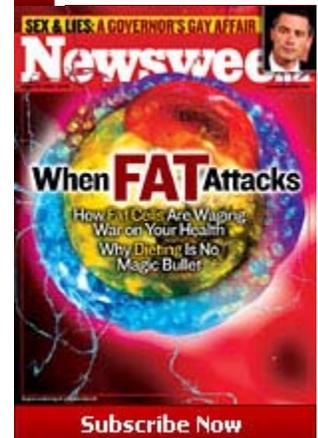

But as O'Keeffe became more confident and celebrated, Stieglitz found himself needing another shot of adoration from another impressionable, esthetically minded young woman. This time it was Dorothy Norman, seven years younger than Stieglitz's own daughter—and also married. O'Keeffe tried to win him back by modeling nude again for him, but his affair eventually led her to a nervous breakdown. Stieglitz was apparently the only sexual relationship she ever had, but a romantic friendship with the Harlem renaissance writer Jean Toomer helped her recover

NEWSLETTER*Sign up for our Web-Exclusive Alert

- Click here to have the latest from Newsweek delivered to your inbox

LIVE VOTE*A Summer to Remember?

- What were the best and worst movies of the season? Cast your vote in our survey

CURRENT ISSUE

- For Jim McGreevey, It Was An Affair to Forget
- Ayad Allwali: Iraq's New Leader Gets Tough
- Bob Samuelson: A Cell Phone? Never for Me.
- Georgia on Our Minds: Reconsidering O'Keefe

enough to pick up her brush again. In 1941 she moved permanently to New Mexico's picturesque high desert and left Stieglitz behind for good.

Out west, O'Keeffe found a way to "mellifluously move between representation and abstraction," as University of Michigan curator Carole McNamara puts it. "And people who are intimidated by abstraction find a way to it with her." An overwhelming number of these fans seem to be female. Drohojowska-Philp notes that other women artists of O'Keeffe's generation and before, such as Mary Cassatt, painted in a style indistinguishable from their male counterparts. But O'Keeffe, she says, "saw her femininity as a positive quality and self-consciously painted in colors traditionally considered to be feminine, like pale pink, yellow or lilac." And long before Judy Chicago's "Dinner Party," she pioneered the use of overtly vaginal imagery.

But before O'Keeffe was a feminist, she was simply—and, in the European-oriented world of modern art, defiantly—American: blunt, pragmatic and spare. "I have not been in Europe," she wrote in 1921. "I prefer to live in a room as bare as possible." (She didn't see Europe until she was in her 60s; except for a couple of paintings in the Prado, she wasn't all that impressed.) In her New Mexico years, she artfully constructed her persona and wrote an autobiography severely downplaying the role of Stieglitz in her life. But more importantly, she managed to create a modernist American landscape. Through painstaking composition, a smooth way of putting on paint and a unique female sensibility, she retained the 19th-century grandeur other modernists had neglected. These days, we could use a little American grandeur that emanates from something as benign as a painting.

© 2004 Newsweek, Inc.

PRINT THIS ARTICLE

EMAIL THIS ARTICLE

MORE FROM NEWSWEEK ENTERTAINMENT

Next →

Snap Judgment: DVDs

- Georgia On Our Minds
- Snap Judgment: DVDs
- Newsmakers
- Newsweek Entertainment Section Front

Newsweek

TOP STORIES

- Terror Watch: Bin Laden's Mystery Man
- Kuntzman: Resigned to Stop

TOP MSNBC STORIES

- Breakthrough in Najaf talks?
- Google lowers IPO price range
- U.S. softballers win 75th straight

- Living a Lie
 - USA Swimmers Go From Gold to Cold
 - What You Don't Know About Fat
 - An Affair To Regret
- Health concerns after Charley
- Arafat admits 'mistakes'

Sponsored LinksBuy O'Keeffe Posters Here

Find Georgia O'Keeffe and more Framing & Fast Shipping. Shop Now!
www.barewalls.com

Georgia O'keeffe Posters

Decorate Your Home with Framed Art! Save on Posters & Prints at Art.com
www.Art.com

Georgia O'Keeffe: Prints

Framed, Matted & Delivered for as Little as $59.95 from ArtGazebo.com
georgiaokeeffe.artgazebo.com

Georgia O'Keeffe

On Sale Today Prints Posters Gifts Custom Framing
www.Prints.Com

ARCHIVES | MULTIMEDIA SHOWCASE | NEWSWEEK RADIO | ABOUT NEWSWEEK
SUBSCRIBER SERVICES | PRESSROOM | ADVERTISING INFORMATION | VIEWPOINT | CONTACT US
EDUCATION PROGRAM | SHOWCASE ADS | BACK COPIES | RIGHTS AND REPRINT SALES

Cover | News | Business | Sports | Tech/Science | Entertainment | Travel | Health | Opinions | Weather | Local News
Newsweek | Today Show | Nightly News | Dateline NBC | Meet the Press | MSNBC TV

About MSNBC.com | Newsletters | Search | Help | News Tools | Jobs | Contact Us | Terms and Conditions | Privacy

© 2004 MSNBC.com

Try MSN Internet Software for FREE!

MSN Home | My MSN | Hotmail | Shopping | Money | People & Chat | Search

Feedback | Help

© 2004 Microsoft Corporation. All rights reserved. Terms of Use Advertise MSN Privacy Statement GetNetWise Anti-Spam Policy

Georgia on our minds. Post categories: Ray Furlong. Eddie Mair | 10:56 UK time, Tuesday, 10 February 2009. Six months after the war in Georgia, the country is struggling to cope with the aftermath - and the impact of the global economic downturn. "The picture was on the wall just outside my hotel room and was my little welcome to Georgia. Later in the week, I got to meet the current top-dog President Saakashvili, who took me on a whirlwind tour of Georgia - first in the presidential jet, then by helicopter. I got to spend more or less the whole day with him, including lunch when sadly photos weren't allowed (you should have seen the feast - huge even by Georgian standards), so there was time to ask him everything. Various " Georgia On Our Mind. Label: Deep Sea Records " SeaD 8001. " This CD was released as a tribute to Sandy Denny, and dedicated to her daughter Georgia. 1 : Recorded in 1980 at Startling Studios 2 : recorded at Blue Moon studios, Banbury and Protocol studios, London 3 : recorded at Magritte studios 4 : recorded at Central studios, Southport 5 : Recorded at Protocol studios, London 6 : recorded at the Half Moon, Putney, November 1990 7 : recorded live at the Ark, Ann Arbor in March 1985 8 : recorded at the Bottomline, New York, June. Georgia on our minds. The week in corruption, 6 November 2020. Transparency International. Transparency Int'l 06 November 2020. We've been following the election situation in Georgia with great concern. The political opponents with controversial ties to Russia and Ukraine faced off during a deeply polarised pre-election campaign. " Notably, Transparency International Georgia and their 600 volunteers have been at the frontlines of the parliamentary election that took place last Saturday. Where elections fail to deliver democracy, the public has other ways of making their voice heard. The mass protests that continue in Belarus twelve weeks after authoritarian leader Lukashenko's re-election, despite the government's violent response, are heartening proof of this. 5) Georgia key to the Senate; 4) Biden promises to roll back Trump's pro-life initiatives; 3) ISIS militants behead and dismember 50 villagers in Mozambique; 2) BLM co-founder Patrisse Cullors signs development deal with Warner Brothers Television; 1) Mystic rabbis claim mysterious rhythmic Earth pulse vibrates at the frequency of God.