COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course offers a chronological survey of Ireland and the Irish from the Act of Union with Great Britain to the present day. It will consider the social, political, cultural and economic aspects of that history, and will place the island of Ireland within its wider contexts, as part of the United Kingdom, as part of Europe, as part of the British Empire, and as the source of the global Irish Diaspora. The course will focus on a number of central issues, including: how enduring sectarian divisions have influenced the development of Irish history; the Famine, mass emigration, and the rise of the Diaspora; the development and course of both Ulster and Southern unionism, and of Irish nationalism; the relationship of Ireland and the Irish to the British Empire and the wider Anglo-world; the Irish revolution, counter-revolution, and partition; the development of the Irish Free State, and Republic of Ireland; the history of Northern Ireland, the Troubles, and the peace process; the collapse of the 'Celtic Tiger'.

INTENDED AIMS AND LEARNING OUTCOMES

By the end of the course students should be able to: undertake scholarly investigation into the issues of modern Irish history; interpret and analyze primary source material; demonstrate detailed knowledge of the course of Irish history, 1800-present; appraise the conflicting narratives of modern Irish history, and analyze specific events, problems, or ideas; work with peers as part of a learning team through group work organised by students; demonstrate scholarly initiative and a willingness to engage in intellectual debate.

This course aims to develop transferable skills in a number of areas. Skills relating to the format of the course are skills that are indispensable in many different kinds of work, both within academia and in the world at large. You are expected to develop your IT skills by submitting your essays in word-processed format. Written and oral work is designed to develop your skills of effective organisation, coherent expression and rational judgement. Lecture, seminar and essays topics have also been chosen in part with a view to prompting such reflections.

ASSESSMENT

The assessment for this course is one 3,500 word research essay (50%) (essay questions will be handed out), one source report (30% each), and a class presentation (20%).

PLEASE NOTE: In order to pass a course on the first attempt, a student must attain a CAS mark of at least 6 (six) on each element of course assessment. Failure to do so will result in a grade of no greater than CAS 8 (eight) for the course as a whole.

ESSAYS

Essays must be approximately 3,500 words in length and submitted in word-processed format. They must be accompanied by a bibliography and footnotes conforming to established academic conventions. Essays will be returned with a mark taken from the Common Assessment Scale and with written comments. All essays will be returned individually, providing you with the opportunity to discuss your essay, techniques of essay writing, and other aspects of the course with your tutor. See School Guidelines (and below) for information on extensions and the late submission of work. Use the Reading List for this course in your preparation, and include a bibliography of items.

Philosophy has been around since the dawn of western civilization. The golden age of Greek philosophy took place in Athens in the 5th century BC. The works of Socrates, Plato, and Aristotle informed thousands of years of thought, becoming central to thought in the Roman world, the Middle Ages, and then resurfacing in the renaissance and later. Starting at the height of the Roman republic, Christian thought was central to philosophy at least until the enlightenment. In the 18th century, questions of how we come to know what we believe we know (epistemology), and new ethical schools began to form. By the late 1800s, questions of language, logic, and meaning took center stage, and the 20th century played host to one of the largest bursts of philosophical work ever seen.

The doctrine of the communication of natures has played a primarily descriptive role in the history of Christology, and so it is perhaps unsurprising that it has largely gone missing from contemporary theology. This is a serious oversight. The doctrine of the communication of natures has played a primarily descriptive role in the history of Christology, and so it is perhaps unsurprising that it has largely gone missing from contemporary theology. This is a serious oversight. There are six schools in the College: Business; Divinity, History and Philosophy; Education; Language and Literature; Law and Social Science. Additionally there are several Research Centres, including: the Centre for Modern Thought, the Elphinstone Institute and the Research Institute of Irish and Scottish Studies. Within the College, there are more than 320 academic members of staff, 200 postgraduate degrees and approximately 1500 graduate students. Postgraduate students are a vital part of our academic community, and every attempt is made to involve you in the intellectual life of the College. Scholarships, Studentships and Bursaries are available now at www.abdn.ac.uk/cass/graduate. The academic year 2013-2014 has presented excitement and challenge, achievement and surprise, and also times of great joy and others of deep sadness. The School was greatly heartened to see such strong enrolments this year in all areas. We experienced growth in our undergraduate numbers, while other theology and religion departments around the UK were in decline.

Mike was a specialist in continental philosophy and theology, with a passion for phenomenological approaches to theology.

On 8 October 2013, the School of Divinity was delighted to welcome the University Chancellor, HRH The Princess Royal, to meet students, staff and friends of the School and New College. On arrival The Princess Royal paused in the New College quad at the statue of John Knox.
