Samuel Barclay Beckett (/ˈbɛːkɛt/; 13 April 1906 – 22 December 1989) was an Irish novelist, playwright, short story writer, theatre director, poet, and literary translator. A resident of Paris for most of his adult life, he wrote in both French and English. Beckett's idiosyncratic work offers a bleak, tragi-comic outlook on existence and experience, often coupled with black comedy, nonsense and gallows humour. It became increasingly minimalist in his later career, involving more aesthetic and This third volume of The Letters of Samuel Beckett focuses on the years when Beckett is striving to find a balance between the demands put upon him by his growing international fame, and his need for the peace and silence from which new writing might emerge. This volume brings together three of Nobel Prize winner Samuel Beckett's major short stories and thirteen shorter pieces of fiction that he calls "texts for nothing." Here, as in all his work, Beckett relentlessly strips away all but the essential to arrive at a core of truth. Molloy is Samuel Beckett's most celebrated novel, and his first published work to be written in French, ushering in a period of concentrated creativity in the late 1940s and early 1950s which included the companion novels Malone Dies and The Unnamable. The tale of Molloy, old and ill, remembering and forgetting, scarcely human, begets a double plot involving the spinsterish Moran, a private detective sent to search him out, whose own deterioration during the quest shadows that of the hero. Reading the four volumes of Samuel Beckett's letters, spanning the years 1929-1989, is an extraordinary experience. For the editors (George Craig, Martha Dow Fehsenfeld, Dan Gunn and Lois More Overbeck), the journey has been both a labour of love a feat of outstanding scholarship. An epic achievement. We owe them our thanks and admiration. Volume 4, tracking Mr Beckett's correspondence from 1966-1989, moves slowly and inevitably into his twilight years; the mind ever-willing but his old bones failing. Beckett was insistent on both his origins and his expatriation, having told a Hungarian publisher in May 1964: "As a writer I have no feeling [End Page 183] of any national attachment. I am an Irishman (Irish passport) living in France for the past 27 years who has written part of his work in English and part in French" (601). Volume three of Samuel Beckett's letters finds Beckett living in his home town, Paris, and coming into the light. The success of Waiting for Godot is still warm and he faces a world of admirers in new translators, writers, journalists ("the bastards"), actors and directors: "people, people, signatures, smiles, confusion of names". These are the years when Harold Pinter first meets Beckett and Beckett first meets Buster Keaton, each to their heroes. Beckett marries his partner, Suzanne Deschevaux Dumesnil, and falls for his lifelong confidante to be, Barbara Bray. The pull of two languages is mirrored by the pull of two private lives.
